(ONE WEEK LATER IN CASE OF RAIN)

George Washington Bicentennial Commemoration

1. VAN CORTLANDT MANSION. Van Cortlandt Park, New York City. (Formerly King's Bridge, Westchester County). Erected by Frederick Van Cortlandt about 1748. In November, 1783, Washington supped and slept here before leaving the next morning to ride to New York City, on its evacuation by the British. The house and its furnishings give one an idea of life among the wealthy people in Colonial days.

Meet at the Mansion at 9:30 a. m.

Greetings by Society of Colonial Dames, State of New York.

The story of Van Cortlandt by Reginald Pelham Bolton.

The story of Old Albany Post Road and Road to Mile Square by Ralph E. Prime, Jr.

2. OLD ALBANY POST ROAD. This winding and hilly road extended from New York City to Albany. A portion of it which still gives something of its early appearance may be seen branching from Broadway near the end of the subway, directly west of Van Cortlandt Mansion. There are several old buildings to be seen along this highway. These are described and pictured in the April number of the Quarterly Bulletin. General Washington came down this road in 1783 on his way to New York City.
3. ROAD TO MILE SQUARE. Branched to the right from the Albany Post Road at a point near the present subway terminus at Van Cortlandt Park. The road continued under the present railroad, turning left and skirting the old mill pond. Thence diagonally across Van Cortlandt Park to the present Central Park Avenue and beyond to Mile Square. Nowhere is its antiquity more evident than at a point directly opposite the road leading out from Hillview Reservoir to Central Park Avenue. Here the old dirt road, now
